

From my own personal standpoint, New Jersey's Do Not Call List has been an astounding success. Not only has the number of unwanted dinner-hours calls been cut to nearly none, but the same can also be said for the early morning hours on the weekends. As far as I'm concerned, I'm bombarded with enough sales pitches and interruptions in my life that I can't control -- I shouldn't be subject to those same sales pitches and interruptions just because I have a tool in my home that could one day save my life or the life of my loved ones if need be -- my telephone.
